

Prophecies - The Family Prayer Center - 2013

Prophecy130904 September 4th 2013

Your Faces will not be Ashamed

For all those who trust in me your faces will not be ashamed saith the Spirit of grace. For anyone who puts their trust in me and determines to what they would determined to be the bitter end know that they will not come to that place of bitter end, but they'll come to a place not of shamefacedness but rather of a place of absolute a place that I continue to describe to you is a place that has been done in my son and finished before the foundation of the world. I established it upon the floods and even nature itself cries out that I am a God that cannot lie. So know this that when you put your trust in my word and sell out to my word to be obedient to me to follow me to the end. It will not be a bitter end, but will be an established end. For the very thing that you trust me in and desire from me is always yours change is necessary for you to enjoy what is yours, but I'm the God that comes even to help you to change. I'm the God of continual change and I change not but I change you so that you can be like me who cannot change and filled with all grace to complete your journey and to go forward in these last days, hallelujah Jesus.