Buy the Time; Sell it Not

I'm calling you out. You've heard the message. You've heard the message of prayer for years and years and years. Once again I'm coming along in a time where the flesh is being bombarded by so many things. I'm asking you to steal away; buy the time; sell it not. Spend the hours in my presence as I promised in my word that my word cannot return unto you void; these hours in my presence, all you intercessors and those who will bring forth supplication, you'll not only find a great reward in the spirit for things that you are asking me for, but you also find that you yourself come to a greater place of resting in me. The reward of the intercessor is to know that I'm with them and that I am providing not only through them but for them as they are going forth. So arise take up, take up your sword and your shield and do that which I have called you to do, saith the Spirit of Grace.
