Let No Man Be Your Measure

Well, you have not been measured out—many of you look at a place where you esteem others, but know this, that your story has not had the ending chapter written. For if you would aspire to greatness that is greatness in Me, I could write you a chapter or two towards the end of your life that would astound you, and the ones that [you] esteem as being spiritual now, you will actually run way past and say, “I cannot believe that I set my sights so low in the past. I could not believe, where I am standing at now, that my aspirations for God were so low by measuring myself in the order of where somebody else walked.”

Come up to a higher place, says the Spirit of Grace, and let no man be your measure. Let Him who was the Firstborn, the Author of the Church, be the One who sets the measure in front of you, says the Spirit of Grace.
