

Prophecies – The Family Prayer Center – 2007

Prophecy071010a – Oct 10, 2007 In Authority, I Have Found What I Need

You may as well rejoice and be glad, says the Spirit of Grace, for the things that have come on you now are not just for a season, for many of you have measured these things and found that they are eternal. Know that the freedom that your spirit is experiencing now is not a temporary fix, says the Spirit of Grace. This is not something that comes or goes, for surely there has been a shift in the Spirit realm. For in the days ahead, these things will be measured in this—that you will find the freedom that many of you have stepped over into is not something as was in yesteryear that you found for a short while came and went, and you could not find it again.

Know this, that the grace that many of you are finding now is part of the overall authority that I have brought to the Church, says the Spirit of the Lord. For in this authority, I have found what I need. I have found enough of what I need now to take you past a very tight place that the enemy scheduled and was hard for many. But know this: Because some endured and would not quit, many will be the benefactor. Many will benefit because of those who would not stop. So rejoice and be glad, for something has changed in the Spirit, and it is not a temporary thing, says the Spirit of Grace.

But you will find that the greatest part of all this is the freedom that you find in your flesh. For you will find that those things that once corralled you and dictated to you how far you would walk in, and pressured your emotions at times so you could not seek Me or open My Word, you will find that, at will, you'll say, "I'll do this." And sure enough, you will find yourself lost in the pages of My Word and with hands lifted up and worshipping Me and find that "My, my, this was not the case of the past." But it will be the case of your future, says the Spirit of Grace.