Prophecy090401 – Apr 1, 2009 All Things Are Made Perfect

There's no catching up—there's no catching up when faith is concerned. For those of you who learn to lay down your life, in a moment's time—immediately—everything is brought to its perfect place, and everything is caught up in order. For the enemy of your soul wages a great battle against the mind and tells those that many who've walked through certain battles of their life, who left them for a season, unknowing where they stood in their walk, trying of their own self to find their way back to a place of anointing—the enemy presses hard to say, “Catch up, catch up, catch up!”

Know this, because of the anointing that is resident among you and the prayers and the faith of the saints and the intercessors, what is available is that moment in time where all things are made perfect. Do not despair, little ones, for those who are least among you who have a heart and an appetite to enter in or enter back into fullness, all can be regained in a moment's time, says the Spirit of Grace. And this will be the order of things as things progress. And you will receive a reward, those of you who sat on the foundation of this thing.

As the apostles wrote and said, “We were with Him from the beginning” know this, that much of your reward will be for those whom you pray into this place and the atmosphere. And you will stand in that day and know that reward is based upon those beginning seasons that you were a part of.

But take note in this, that as they come in, the babies will be born with strength, and they will only be babies for a short, short season, says the Spirit of the Lord, and as I have said in another place, babies born with teeth, says the Spirit of Grace. They are able to digest, to eat the meat and digest it, and in a moments time almost, they will go from infancy to adulthood to spread the Word of the Lord, and to be strong and to spring forth with great might, and to lay hands on the sick and to cast out devils and to raise the dead, says the Spirit of Grace.
