Work the Work of Grace

Your whole life will not be filled with war, for know this: after every season of war, when dominion has reigned to the outer limb, to the outer limbs of your life, you'll find great rejoicing. Even the rejoicing that is in the trial will manifest itself with exuberance, great, great swelling peace, unexplainable giddiness, to that extreme, says the Spirit of Grace. But know this: In the trial, the same dominion that brings you to the place of where all things become quiet is the same dominion that's working in the hour when all things are noisy. So work the work of grace, and when all things come into that dominion, use those seasons to move forward. Use those seasons to run further and faster, for you will find great, great oasis for your soul.
