Fall in Love with Your Prayer Closets

Let me help you fall in love once again or even more so with your prayer closet, saith the Spirit of Grace. I come; I come as your Father. I come with no rebuke as in laying a burden upon you that you cannot bear. But I come as lover and friend and one that would entice you away to say I desire you more than the things that you could do for me and I ask you to come away and I ask you again to come away and if necessary renew that place in your heart not legalistically but far greater than that, a place of determination to spend the time with me that I've asked you to spend, saith the Spirit of Grace. For this outpouring will not be built upon works; it will be built upon supernatural intercession as the Saints give their selves unto me. For years you've heard purging, purging, purging; that is still the way; the way up, the way up is the way down or the way down is the way up. The more that you bend the knee of your heart unto me and the more that you give unto me I provide an avenue of authority in you that comes into the church and then ultimately into the world. Fall in love with your prayer closets. Fall in love. Do not be ashamed if that place has not been attended to as it should've been; just simply repent and receive the strength of my endowment and my love and in my encouragement. I desire that the happiest part of your life and the anticipation of the happiest part of the anticipation of your day is those moments that you'll spend in my presence whether dry or wet, whether seasoned with spiritual salt or in that place where it is only faith that causes you to utter your prayer. You'll find that there grows inside of you a hunger as hunger is fed and hunger satisfied; hunger also will grow. Hunger will be fed but hunger will grow. Thirst will be quenched but thirst will be also intensified. Allow me to provide and call you away. Renew your commitment to the prayer closet and you'll find that the happiest part of your life is in that place, saith the Spirit of Grace.
