Following Truth on the Inside

Part of that feasting, saith the Spirit of Grace is coming into that place of communion where I commune with your spirit. I speak where I really speak and where I get revelation and understanding and direction of life is over to your spirit. Too many of my children are trying to figure out something with their head; it is not coming to pass in peace like they want it to. I say that when you come in line with the things of the spirit and allow me to pass over through to your spirit. In that place where your spirit lives your natural soul and mind will come to a place of understanding and peace and then peace, peace will be the thing that guides and directs your path. Did I not say that wisdom is justified of her children? Too many of my children move forward in the things that they have come to a conclusion in their mind and the things that they have derived through the process of reasoning and as a result of it, things go amiss and then they blame me as if I directed them into a falsehood. But know that when you settle things according to my word and according to the peace that passes all understanding even when your natural mind doesn't understand it, but you know that you're following righteousness and you're following the way of truth and you've not discarded any of those checkpoints, but you're following truth on the inside. Then wisdom will be justified of her children. In other words what you said was me and what you thought would be me you'll come to the end of it and sure enough I'll be standing there, saith the Spirit of Grace. I'll make a way of escape in the storm. I'll bring forth wisdom so that you can endure and peace will be the order of the day. One thing as a telltale sign, one thing as you're in the storm you're wondering, am I on the path that he set in front of me? You'll know because humility, a teachable spirit, will set the order and it will justify the place that you call the mind of Christ. When you're readily offended, when you're readily offended and it feels like your bruised on every area and when someone touches that area, you're so eager to defend it. Then you'll know I'm not in that; I'm not in that. But if you can quietly reside in the place that you call my mind to you it won't matter. It won't matter what is said or what is done around you. You will rest in my peace, and that peace will be justified of her children. The offspring the days ahead what will come about by what you decided was my wisdom, will justify your present day actions, saith the Spirit of Grace.
